

Don't Eat The Cheese!

When you woke up this mornin'

You went to the kitchen to drink

But then you saw your bread

Sittin' there just waitin' to be used

And beside it lay a morsel of cheese,

but you knew it wasn't for you

But the pangs of lust overtook you

Temptation more than you could stand

With a sigh and a quick look around

You took them into your hand

And then you felt something quite different

Your conscience was too hard to bear

So Don't, Eat. The cheese!

It ain't good for you, you know, silly girl, cause you have allergies

Don't. Take. The cream!

You know that you can't have what comes from the cow

It's why you have goats and sheep

Well You may never quite realise

That you don't just hurt yourself

I know that you know better

Than to think that I don't wish to help

I know it is hard, but you have to try, to stop hurtin' yourself

You have to be strong, little darlin'

We all have some things we can't have

I can't take away all the cheese in the house,

Lord knows I need some for myself

But the difference between us both my dear,

Is that one can have cheese and one can't
